Digital Print System Offers CD and DVD Users Custom Disc Printing and Unmatched Color

GSA now offers on Schedule a high resolution, digital printing system that gives Government Agencies and GSA Advantage customers an alternative to conventional methods when printing and labeling their optical media products – CD's, CD-R's (recordable CD's), DVD's, and CD business cards. The digital printing process eliminates set-up costs associated with conventional printing. This is a huge advantage when printing smaller orders of 10,000 disks or less, characteristic of many government jobs. The print system GSA offers involves digitizing artwork on computer, transferring the image onto a thin film, and then applying the computer generated graphic to the plastic disc after being treated with a special bonding solution. The bonding process and specially designed printing equipment combine to provide a fully automated digital print system that produces approximately 200 printed discs per minute with photographic quality (600 dpi) graphics.

The digital graphics can also be raised to create a textured 3-dimensional effect, like the raised numbers molded into a credit card. Besides giving a unique visual impression, the method is being evaluated as a possible way of providing the blind with Braille information printed directly on the CD surface. Digital printing is also useful when there is a need to customize the printed surface to match different discs with varying information.

Digital print to discs can also be used for security. Serialization of optical disc media can be used to control who has access to data along with accountability of how it is stored. Trackability helps prevent problems of piracy, theft, loss of production, and loss of sales by making positive authentication and ownership easy to establish. Since digital graphic qualities on disc cannot be duplicated, there is automatic authentication and anti-pirating protection by just inspecting the printed surface. Variable data can be programmed to print security banners, handling instructions, individual control and copy numbers, and bar codes for control of discs that contain classified or proprietary information. The technology even offers the ability to print hidden watermarks that are visible only when viewed through special polarized lenses.

CD tickets are another application. The variable data can be programmed to print individual section, row, seat number, and customer name to disc. The CD becomes the actual entry ticket for any sports, concert, stadium or auditorium event—with a fan's name and date printed with photographic quality, it automatically becomes a collectible item, saved and played for years to come.

There are also applications within Government for preparing high-level presentations, for archiving information, for education and training sectors, for putting Braille on disc, recruiting, and in numbering for control purposes. Many high tech users are also interested in having CD-R preprinted with organizational logos, customized for control, and stocked in bulk to burn as needed for beta testing, software development, unexpected presentations, and promotions. Applications such as these are limitless for Government CD and DVD users.

New Time Systems Use GPS and Wireless Technology to Synchronize

The scope of today's global business often demands synchronized time. All over the world, power companies use precise time to regulate power system grids and reduce power losses. Airports and bus systems require precisely synchronized time to keep them moving on schedule. The people involved in these activities need to have synchronized, exact time.

Now wireless technology can synchronize wall clocks to keep the people in the organizations on schedule. Global Positioning System (GPS) master-satellite time systems use a combination of GPS and FM radio signals to synchronize all clocks in a system. These new systems are easier to install and less expensive than hardwired systems and they are more reliable than either hardwired systems or clocks that synchronize via AM radio signals from the National Institute of Standards & Technology (NIST).

These new time systems incorporate a receiver that captures an atomic time signal from the United States government's Global Positioning System (GPS). The signal maintains official U.S. time and a master transmitter rebroadcasts the time via a localized radio signal to all of the "satellite" system clocks. The satellite clocks then self-adjust not only to the exact same time—to the second—but to the officially correct time.

Ease of Use

Whether for new construction, renovation, or replacement, installation is a simple process. GPS master-satellite time systems are easy and economical to install. Each system is made up of essentially two parts: a "master," which includes a GPS receiver and an FM transmitter, and an unlimited number of freestanding "satellite" clocks. The receiver needs to be placed where it can capture a GPS signal. The transmitter then broadcasts the time signal via a localized FM signal. Each battery-operated clock can be hung without having to be connected to a hardwired system. Since the clocks are not hardwired, the system is easy to reconfigure or add onto for renovations. The extended-life batteries last for up to five years.

Cost Savings

In addition to saving the cost of hardwiring, labor costs are reduced because the clocks do not have to be reset for any reason. Neither the master transmitter nor the satellite clocks are vulnerable to power interruptions. The batteries last for up to five years and when you change the battery, the clock "remembers" the time. The replacement cost of these modern clocks is lower than traditional hardwired mechanical clocks. Unlike ordinary quartz clocks, these new "satellite" clocks automatically adjust for daylight savings time changes. So, the cost for maintenance staff to adjust all the clocks in a building twice a year on overtime hours is eliminated.

More Reliable

This system is more reliable than previous generations of clocks that received an AM signal from the NIST WWVB radio station in Colorado. GPS Master-Satellite systems still synchronize with the NIST, but the signal is instead obtained via GPS satellites and rebroadcast locally via FM signals. This new technology eliminates the atmospheric variances that the AM signal is often subject to and works anywhere in the world. Since it captures its time signal from GPS satellites that rotate around the earth, the signal is not influenced by distance from any particular tower.

Unlike hardwired systems that operate off of pulses sent through electrical systems, the system is not subject to electrical surges. And although it is possible to synchronize computer displays to the official time, wall clocks are still necessary because people are not always in front of computers. Centralized, synchronized clocks make sure that everyone in a particular work environment has the correct time.

ALL-SEALRubberized Roof-Repair / Leak Sealant Aerosol*Prevent Damaging Roof Leaks*Put an End to Current Leaks & Costly Repairs with Just a Spray!

Did you know that roof damage begins when your roof is only 5 years old? Summer heat, UV, bitter cold and dry weather create problems around seams, flashings, pipes, slits, puckering or alligating — the major causes of roof leaks.

All-Seal immediately eliminates this damage before it becomes a problem. It sprays-on a flexible rubberized coating which ends leaks. Incredibly durable, it won't melt & run in the heat, nor freeze & crack in cold. And it adheres to virtually any roof surface!

Why invest in an expensive roof repair or resurfacing when you can eliminate the leaks with just a spray? All-Seal even includes extension tubes to fill-in cracks around doorways, windows, etc.

- Seals roofs, seams, flashings, downspouts, around pipes and more.
- Durable and abrasion resistant - can be walked on when dry.
- Impervious to water & any weather conditions, summer or winter.
- Prevents rust and corrosion on A/C drip pans & all metal surfaces.
- Extensive coverage per can.
- GSA contract price per case: 12 cans/$194.02 delivered.

STAINLESS STEEL KOTE

Ends Rusting on Metal Surfaces

Rust destroys steel surfaces and turns expensive equipment into scrap metal. Stainless Steel Kote ends the problem. A remarkable breakthrough in rust treatment. Not a paint - it is real 316 grade stainless steel in aerosol form. Stainless Steel Kote totally seals out oxygen and moisture - the main causes of rust - and converts the surface to attractive, non-rusting stainless steel. Simply remove loose rust and spray on - no priming needed.

Able to withstand acids, salt damage and heat up to 1200 degrees without blistering or peeling. Stainless Steel Kote has helped many industrial, municipal and federal facilities with their rust problems - it can solve yours too!

- Outside uses include: salt spreaders, snow plows, pipes, mufflers, vehicle bodies, lawn mowers & tractors, cooling towers, iron railings, wheels, compactors, sign posts, snow blowers, chlorinator rooms, marine equipment, etc.
- Inside uses include: Urinal partitions, peeling toilet flushometers, ventilation fans, boilers, lockers, pool areas, etc.
- Can be painted over to match your desired color, if required.

Calendar Correction

Corrected Calendar – 7510-01-450-5472

Early shipments of the UNICOR blotter-style calendar for 2002 included some calendars with errors. These calendars had 2 "June" pages and no "July" page. The October page also mistakenly identified Columbus Day as October 7, instead of October 14. Corrected copies of the calendar are now in stock at the Customer Supply Center for all new orders. Any customers who received an incorrect version may request a replacement calendar by calling GSA at 1-800-488-3111.

2003 Calendars and Planners Getting The Most Out of Your Day

Thousands of years ago, ancient civilizations made their calendars out of stone. Although these calendars were very accurate, they were never practical for hanging on cubicle walls or carrying around in your pocket. That's why GSA offers a range of calendars that are convenient and easy to write on.

Reduce Energy Use, Help the Environment, and Save Money

Resource Efficiency Management (REM) programs help Federal agencies improve the efficiency and reliability of systems, reduce energy use, help the environment and save money. Agencies who develop a Resource Efficiency Management Program soon start realizing the benefits of resource efficiency. In California, the Navy, Marine Corps and United States Postal Service (USPS) have obtained tremendous results using REMs.

REMs act much like a detective in identifying areas of savings. Through a REM program, a full-time, dedicated energy manager can identify and implement energy and water conservation and cost-saving opportunities demonstrating the environmental benefits of a strong energy management program. REMs have provided savings to the Navy, Marine Corps and the USPS with a payback of greater than 10 to 1 against contract costs.

Typical REM tasks include:

- Technical and awareness training
- Energy Resource Accounting
- Energy Efficiency Project Development
- Energy and utility studies
- Support of Energy Savings Performance Contract (ESPC) and Utilities Energy Services Contracts (UESC) Contracts

Tasks and their solutions must be tailored to comply with Executive Orders and Policies. The GSA Federal Supply Schedule, Energy Management Services 871 II can help meet your specific need under the Schedule's Special Item Number (SIN) 871-201.

For more information call (800) 241-RAIN (7246).

GSA's Language Services Schedule Offers Compliance with Sections 508 and 504 of the Rehabilitation Act.

The Language Services schedule enhances the ability of agencies to comply with the requirements of Sections 508 and 504 of the Rehabilitation Act. GSA offers services that support the disabled community through custom Braille transcription under Language Services Schedule 738 II.

Visual graphics translated into laser-precise, high-resolution tactile graphic images that are unique in clarity and readability is but one example of the innovative solutions that may fit your needs. These tactile graphics can be integrated into textbooks for the disabled community. The visually impaired person can access the graphical information by touch, and even sound, if a touch tablet is used.

The Internal Revenue Service recently used the schedule to obtain tax publications in Braille. They also set up 20 separate training modules for their disabled employees to help the general public with their tax questions and forms "on-line" with an interface for Braille translation also available under the Language Schedule. This process combined the significant visual word processing power of Word with a complete Grade 2 Braille translation algorithm.

Innovative uses of the schedule also include the utilization of Braille and Braille in foreign languages to satisfy law enforcement and intelligence requirements.

For more information call (800) 241-RAIN (7246).

Thrilled With Your Last Schedule Procurement?

The Proven Solution for Federal Enterprise-Wide Learning and Knowledge Management

Agencies all over the Federal government have chosen to rely on the Meridian KSI Knowledge Centre™ to build a better trained, better informed workforce by capturing, utilizing, and leveraging their knowledge assets.

The Knowledge Centre is a best of breed learning and knowledge management solution that increases the effectiveness of employee training while lowering the cost associated with it. It combines award-winning e-learning functionality with a full suite of knowledge management tools that enables your employees to capture best practices and good ideas and then share that information across the entire enterprise.

MERIDIAN KSI CLIENTS INCLUDE:

- Air Combat Command Intelligence Institute
- Air Force Institute for ADL
- Army JAG Corps
- Defense Acquisition University
- Defense Intelligence Agency

The Meridian KSI Knowledge Centre™ enables organizations to more effectively and efficiently forge and execute their training strategies. After September 11th, agencies responsible for protecting Homeland Security were forced to respond quickly to a brand new set of challenges. After rigorous and independent evaluations, the FBI, INS, FEMA, and the Defense Intelligence Agency all selected the Knowledge Centre to help them achieve their training goals, depending upon it to perform mission critical tasks such as training their existing staff, quickly assimilating new employees, and managing knowledge.

The FBI selected the Meridian KSI Knowledge Centre™ as the learning management system to meet the needs of their employees and state and local law enforcement officers. During the selection process, 24 different systems were tested before the FBI narrowed the field to six vendors for a shootout within their secure environment. Of the six vendors, and on three different evaluative metrics, Meridian KSI was the top choice.
